COUNTER IMPROVISED THREAT GRAND CHALLENGE PHASE 2: INTEGRATION

CIT - GC PH2

29 JUN

Ext. From 20 Apr

- Request for Proposal - Defence Support and Reform Group

The Counter Improvised Threat Grand Challenge (CIT - GC) of the Next Generation Technologies Fund is entering a Phase 2 challenge aimed at realising leap ahead technologies for Countering Improvised Threats by research, engineering and development in Australia. The improvised threats facing Australia and our coalition partners have a number of features that range in complexity and can now operate in all environments (under or on the surface of sea, beneath and on land and in the air). Threat actors who design and manufacture improvised threats can exploit available technologies or create specific, purpose developed technologies for control, deployment, initiation and kinetic effect. The improvised threat is dynamic, and is evolving rapidly to improve performance or in response to countermeasures. These features dictate that a next generation Counter Improvised Threat system must in turn be able to detect a wide range of threats and then match and employ suitable effectors under appropriate response control systems. A Counter Improvised Threat system needs to be agile and capable of fast evolution. The Grand Challenge is to demonstrate an integrated system that can detect and neutralise improvised threats on a complex joint battlespace with minimal risk to Defence personnel and civilians.

COMPANY OPPORTUNITIES

MARYBOROUGH FORGE FACILITY

3 APR

- Expression of Interest - Rheinmetall NIOA Munitions Pty Ltd

Rheinmetall NIOA Munitions (RNM - a joint venture between Rheinmetall Waffe Munition GmbH (RWM) and NIOA) will establish an advanced forging and manufacturing facility in Maryborough, Queensland. The forging and manufacturing facility will produce artillery shell cases and other munitions-related products for supply to the Australian Defence Force (ADF) and for export to allied nations around the world via Rheinmetall's Global Supply Chain. The ADF - through its supply arrangement with NIOA and Rheinmetall - currently imports artillery shell cases from overseas for use by the Australian Army in both training and military combat. Production from the Maryborough facility will replace imported munitions and will supplement Rheinmetall's existing munitions manufacturing base to meet demand from customers overseas. Critically, the forging and manufacturing facility will ensure that future munitions supplies to the ADF will be Australian-made and create Australian Industry Capability for current and future munitions programs. Expressions of Interest are being sort for the following work packages:

- Container Forklift
- Qty two (2) Gantry Crane Systems
